A much-anticipated documentary on the Eastland Disaster, Chicago’s Deadliest Day, will make its debut at the Chicago Maritime Museum on Tuesday, July 9 to an exclusive group of CMM supporters. The film has been underwritten by the Chicago Marine Heritage Society and its chairman and CMM board member, Capt. Dave Truitt. The sneak preview will coincide with the unveiling of the museum’s expanded Eastland Exhibit.
Two CMM Board Members Commended for Waterway Stewardship

Chicago Maritime Museum board members, Grant Crowley, and the late Ralph Frese, are named in the list of top forty people who have played a role in the extraordinary recovery of the Chicago River system, by Friends of the Chicago River.

“The story of responsible water stewardship plays out prominently in the history of Chicago,” says CMM Chairman Dirk Lohan. “We are proud of our museum leaders who have helped make it happen.”

Grant is named for his work to ensure people of all ages are on the water through a multitude of community outreach programs. Ralph is honored for enabling tens of thousands of people to paddle Chicago-area rivers.

Great Lakes White Hurricane of 1913

In November 1913, twelve ships sank in the deadliest Great Lakes storm in history, nicknamed the White Hurricane for its blizzard-like conditions and high winds. While the exact death toll is unknown, it was estimated at 260–300. Read more here: https://www.detroitnews.com/media(cinematic/gallery/93613662/the-great-lakes-white-hurricane-of-1913/

Competitive Swim in Chicago River
Planned for September

“Nobody in their right mind can imagine actually swimming in the river. But if you look at the numbers, it really has improved to the point where you can safely have direct exposure.” Doug McConnell, urban swimming advocate. Read more here.
